From the Editor

ONCE again we come to our bumper Summer issue. The 'What Use is a Map?' Exhibition is described in these pages, and it is being held at the British Library in London, and continues until June, 1990. However, there are the other attractions for members, beginning with the reception at the Map House in London on 16th June. The Symposium begins on the next day at the British Library at 10 a.m. On the evening of the 17th June, the Annual Dinner will take place at Imperial College, London, and on the next day, 18th June, the Map Fair will be held at the New Connaught Rooms, London.

Later this year, there are more events to attract members and their friends. Beginning on 6th October, there is the Seventh Annual Symposium to be held in Athens, sponsored by the Society for Hellenic Cartography. Only a month later, there will be a full-day regional meeting at York.

Full details of all these events will be found in this issue. If you haven't booked your place in them, now is the time to make up your mind. A great deal of work and preparation has gone into organising the functions. Do your part, and attend them – remember how much you've enjoyed them in recent years!
